

Start date: October 1, 2019 (third round)

Opportunities

- Cooperation with excellent junior and senior researchers in a motivating environment
- Further establishment of an international interdisciplinary educational research network of researchers working at Leibniz institutes and universities throughout Europe
- An outstanding setting for developing new and innovative research ideas in the field of interdisciplinary educational research, as well as support for post-College research proposals
- Several workshops and conferences with senior researchers from the participating institutes and universities, as well as with international guests
- Interdisciplinary activities developed independently by the fellows and carried out in cooperation with colleagues from other disciplines within the College (“Micro Groups” – e.g. funding for English language editing for project related journal articles, and travel costs)
- Funding for participating in the interdisciplinary CIDER workshops (incl. the joint workshops with young scholars of the Leibniz Education Research Network (LERN))
- Participating in CIDER modules on public science and on professional skills
- Mentoring, if desired, by one of the participating senior scientists or fellows of the first two cohorts.

Expectations

- Mandatory active participation in College activities and workshops (schedule see page 2)
- Collaboration in (at least) one Micro Group on a College research topic (Micro Groups should start within the first two years of the fellowship)
- Publication of scientific articles on College research topics
- Two transfer/public science publications or activities during the fellowship
- Strong interest in secondary data analyses.
